

RESULTS OF FEARING GOD

Found in 83 passages (92 verses) from our list.

When the fear of God is present, there is a tendency for certain things to happen. Many of these things are so wonderful, that it leaves us questioning why anyone would ever want to not fear him! It is a great shame and a horrible evil, that false teachers so often try to turn people away from the fear of God - often under the pretext that "fear of God" and "fear of punishment" are the same thing, or that "fear of God" and "love of God" are incompatible opposites! They steal from people the very blessings, love and acceptance from God that they so greatly long for!

Some of the verses listed below may have application in a specific setting; others will have application at all times. In the Old Testament, some passages may have a greater focus on the physical blessings which are the result of such fear, and these may have less relevance at the present time (since we are under a different covenant - Hebrews 8:7-13). Yet even those with limited application, when viewed with the rest, will help to illustrate basic principles and trends. (Comments about the issue of "blessings" are included at the end of the study, and may help in providing a better understanding of how verses about blessings apply to us today.)

Since the concept of "fear" can be translated several ways (including words such as "afraid" and "reverence"), it is put in italics, where present in the verses listed below. Verses are summarized; check the Bible (and the context of the verses) for a better understanding of their significance. Consider this outline a worksheet that can be used to help develop one's "fear concept," rather than the final conclusion.

Genesis 3:10 - I was afraid ... so I hid. (Context: They had sinned and were awaiting judgment, which they knew they deserved. This "fear" is different from the type found in most of the other passages in this outline.)

8. Comments about blessings (a note about Section 2).

- a. Note the context of the verses. Under the New Testament covenant, there may be a lesser emphasis on the present physical blessings (though at times such blessings may still exist).
- b. The follower of Jesus and the merely religious "church-goers" will often view blessings in opposite ways. The "church-goer" will often be focused on himself and his enjoyment of blessings, and on how he can get more blessings and enjoy them further. In contrast, the follower of Jesus will be focused on how he can love God and neighbor, whether or not the blessings are present.
- c. Blessings are not a guarantee of God's approval. In this present life, wicked people sometimes do experience blessings:
- (a) Mere external obedience to God may result in some blessings, even though the obedience may not be a genuine expression of the person's heart.
  - (b) The blessings received by those who do fear God may benefit others around them who don't fear God.
  - (c) Injustice may result in temporary blessings for the wicked; but they will lose them in the end, and face a greater judgment than if they had not had them.
- d. Not all blessings are immediately received. In fact, some may not be received (at least in their fullness) until the Day of Justice.
- e. Many blessings (especially those we call "spiritual blessings") are not dependent on circumstances, and can exist even when circumstances are unpleasant. Come what may, those who fear God are blessed. (This is why scripture can tell us to rejoice when we are going through trials. Example - James 1:2.)
- f. Many of the passages in this study focus on the normal tendency that will occur when fear of God is present. Yet we also find passages which tell us that injustice in the world sometimes keeps physical blessings from occurring. (Look at Job's example, or at Asaph - Psalm 73.) We need to remember this, and (if applicable), look forward to the future Day of Justice, when all will be made right.
